Welcome to the 1994-95 Bethanian. Take a look inside and see, as this Bethanian photographer did when shooting Old Main, the year from a different angle. (by Tom Balistreri)

AT THE TIME TO Remember

THE WORLD — BETHANY STYLE

Students came back to Bethany in September to face a whirlwind of registration, unpacking, convocations, new faces and new classes. Things were different this year, however—an unusually large freshman class was on hand to greet the upperclassmen, the new Health and Recreation Center was almost completed, and Bethany had joined the information superhighway over the summer months. Some things at Bethany never change, though; students returning to their beloved campus found that there were still not enough parking places, they still couldn't see to walk back to their housing units at night, the food at the caf was still not like mom's home cooking and a bit of mail and a friendly smile from Jerry at the Post Office was barely enough to make life worth living. Through the eyes of the yearbook photographers, however, the year was a fun and exciting one. From the many theatre productions to those lively and enterprising Greek mixers, the moments were captured. Many friends returned for Homecoming, Greek Sing once again provided laughs and healthy competition, the weather cooperated making Snow Carnival a success and life Bethany style in 1994-95 won't be forgotten.

•I've got a negative feeling about that one.

Another year at dear ol' Bethany

by Kara Schultz

as students began to arrive on campus in late August, they saw familiar faces—and some faces that had never left campus.

While most were taking advantage of being home for the summer, some stayed on campus working for the college.

One, sophomore Eric Harvey, became a handyman for the Physical Plant and now claims to be a “grass-cutting expert.”

Even though students had work to do, don't think for a minute the summer was all work and no play.

Sophomore Jen Klages went to a Grateful Dead concert. Junior Shön Meale traveled home to spend time in England.

Back in the states, seniors Dave Shelek and Brian Dickman were cooking up their own fun. They went skinny-dipping in the Wheeling Park pool and watched junior John Bowers' car roll into Morlan Hall one afternoon.

Sporting events seemed to highlight many students' summer. Senior Chris Colcombe attended the All-Star game in Pittsburgh. Meale went to some World Cup soccer games.

The summer proved quite successful for Phi Kappa Tau as they were presented with the Rolland Maxwell Award.

While students were busy resting and relaxing, administrators were busy on campus. With enrollment up almost 20 percent, the college was faced with its largest in-coming class in four years.

About 250 new students were registered to attend fall classes. The class was comprised of 84 women and 134 men from 21 states. Eighteen students were from 11 foreign countries.

A Bethany tradition—the matriculation ceremony—was revived. The Class of 1998 marched through the Oglebay Gates and signed a book marking their entrance into the college.

This tradition began when the school opened in 1840, but, during the 1930s, fell by the wayside.

With the semester in full swing, fall convocation was the scene of the presentation of awards for academic achievement and leadership.

The Anna Ruth Bourne Award was presented to Phi Mu for maintaining a cumulative GPA of 3.30 for the 1994 spring semester. Delta Tau Delta earned the W. Kirk Woolery Award, with a 3.17 cumulative GPA.

The Richard B. Kenney Freshman Leadership Award was presented to Christy Cooley and Tony Michael for demonstrating outstanding scholarship and leadership during their freshman year.

After the awards presentations, former Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm charismatically addressed those in attendance.

Through the wizardry of computers, Bethany joined the ranks of other colleges by adding e-mail and an on-line library card catalog.

With the school year progressing rapidly, it was time to invite moms and dads to Bethany so they could enjoy the experience too.

Preparations for Parents' Weekend rounded out the month of September. Greek organizations warmed up their vocal cords, and practices for the FAC Talent Show became more serious.

And the winner is . . .

by Kara Schultz

the sisters of Alpha Xi Delta and the brothers of Phi Kappa Tau got the month off to a good start by winning the 49th annual Greek Sing competition as part of Parents' Weekend activities.

Alpha Xi sang a Motown medley created by juniors Jeannette Rice and Beth Kasserman.

The Phi Taus sang the "Flintstone's Theme" with variations to describe their fraternity.

The flaming colors of mid-October provided the backdrop for Homecoming. Friday's kick-off event was Bethany's first-ever block party on College Street. Later that evening, comedian Vic Henley entertained students and alumni.

On Saturday, most students were awakened to the sounds of honking horns and blaring sirens, while the Dixie Dudes strummed their way through campus in the Homecoming parade. The parade led participants and spectators to the new Thomas Phillips Johnson Health and Recreation Center for the dedication ceremony. Amongst all the tailgaters, lunch was served. Later, everyone settled in for a beautiful afternoon of Bison football and mingling with friends.

The highlight of the afternoon came at halftime, when seniors Brian McCord and Jen Dragisich were named Homecoming king and queen. After some post-game rest, students who attended the Homecoming dance were entertained by the reggae sounds of the Flow Band.

With the biggest weekend of the semester over, students had one more week to endure before midterm break. Most took the long weekend as an opportunity to go home, get some work done, catch up on some much needed rest and relax.

October's grand finale, Halloween, brought those with artistic ability out in full force for the Pep Club's annual pumpkin carving contest in Benedum Commons. In addition, Aladdin Food Service sponsored guessing games for students, some with cash prizes.

The championship belongs to Bethany

by Kara Schultz

With the hustle and bustle of October finally over, most Bethanians were looking forward to the long-awaited Thanksgiving Break.

But before students could finish their studies and begin packing for the trip home, there was some last minute business to take care of. Student Board of Governors began its search for a new administration, while the men's soccer team accepted its 15th NCAA Division III playoff invitation in coach John Cunningham's 27 years as head coach.

Before we knew it, break was upon us and the soccer team was on its way to the Final Four. At the same time, SBOG candidates had been narrowed, with the ticket of juniors Brian Lemasters and Tim Pickana running against juniors Todd Ollinger and Mandy Allen.

Most students didn't want to go home, and some didn't. Others couldn't take off their headsets long enough to even know it was time to leave. It seemed the entire campus was tuned to WVBC for the broadcast of the soccer semi-finals in Trenton, N.J.

The overtime victory sent the Bison to the final game. Some students headed to the game rather than home. The national championship belonged to the Bison. Finally, a Thanksgiving everyone could be thankful for. With a national title in hand, students returned to campus fully rested and ready to face the remaining three weeks of the semester.

The crowd (left) spent most of the game against the University of California at San Diego hoping senior goalie Malleh Sallah could continue making miraculous saves. (by Jon Vogel) Sallah continued to make the saves, and the goal by Shön Meale allowed the Bison fans (above) to celebrate in overtime against the former defending champions. (by Jenn Leahy)

The countdown begins

by Kara Schultz

Coming off the heels of an incredible victory by the men's soccer team, students and faculty alike began looking toward finals and a lengthy break. With the new SBOG administration in place, headed by juniors Brian Lemasters and Tim Pickana, the countdown to break was on.

To ease the wait, Bethany's theatre hosted student-directed one act plays. Junior Craig Williams' TOWER editorial column concerning the quality of Bethany students had the whole campus up in arms.

But despite all the uproar, students made their way to the annual all-campus Christmas formal to dance the night away to the sounds of the Jack Purcell Orchestra.

Finally, with exams out of the way, students went home to enjoy the holidays. By this time, rest and relaxation were on everyone's agenda.

With Williams' editorial highlighting the poor standing of students, some were concerned with the uncertainty of their return. Faculty came down hard on those in poor academic standing. Forty-one students were dismissed for not meeting academic requirements, with 25 being eligible to return through various appeal processes.

The brothers of Beta Theta Pi found themselves right in the middle of the crackdown. Despite their new house and attempts to change their image, the administration refused to let them get off on the right foot. Disciplinary action was taken based on their having an unregistered party—their annual Christmas chapter—in mid-December. Many members felt the sanctions were harsh, but tried desperately to put the whole incident behind them.

In a few weeks, however, the campus was alive again with anxious seniors returning to study for the dreaded senior comprehensive exams. With "writtens" out of the way, shrieks and cheers of excitement were heard on the hour all over campus, congratulating 'ac-comp-lished' seniors.

Even the words 'Weimer Lecture Hall' caused a sinking feeling in every senior's stomach, but classes were back in session and now the countdown to spring break was on.

There's nothing fishy about going against Bethany's comps tradition, as senior Randy "Stork" Weiser proves by offering the newly ac-comp-lished senior Steve Kopcha shrimp and cocktail sauce instead of the typical alcoholic beverage. (by Jon Vogel)

It's no wonder why cube 3 at Phi Tau is "where it's at"—with sophomores Brent Reynolds, Tracy Hupp, Jayme Rutter and Marcie Williams and junior Tom Balistreri, even J-term is cool and happening. (by Jon Vogel)

by Kara Schultz

With classes back in full swing, everyone was looking for a fresh start—the Psi chapter of Beta Theta Pi included. The Betas moved into their new house, much to the relief of the brothers.

Bethany Theatre began its season with “Canterbury Tales...Retold.” This original, energetic, interactive production encouraged audience participation, a refreshing break from traditional theatre. It featured sophomore Eric Armstrong and Eric Margerum, assistant professor of Fine Arts.

Rush provided an opportunity for freshmen to get to know more about the Greek system on campus. And when they call it rush, they mean it. With open houses, preference parties and Bid Day, the whole campus seemed to be in a frenzy.

Of the 682 students on campus, 67 percent were Greek affiliated after this year’s Bid Day, with Delta Tau Delta welcoming its largest pledge class in five years. More than 20 freshmen pledged the fraternity.

One of the first orders of business in February was passing the spring SBOG budget. More than $100,000 was made available, including $4,000 in contingency.

In sports, senior Joe Childress racked up 1,166 career points in men’s basketball, going over the 1,000 mark in the Bison’s game against Thiel early in the month.

In the midst of all this activity, the weather proved most interesting. Temperatures fluctuated from spring-like to sub-zero overnight. Coughs, sore throats, stuffy noses, and injuries resulting from icy conditions kept Health Service busy the entire month.

A common stress reliever, the Thursday night trip to Drover’s, took a turn for the worse this month. “Cheap wings” no longer existed, as Drover’s dropped their 20 percent discount, much to the dismay of students.

The administration found itself in despair as well, with enrollment down 8.3 percent from the fall semester. Sixty-one students did not return for the spring semester.

But Alpha Psi Omega had its own cure for the mid-February blues. Cabaret provided lots of laughter by taking a satirical look at the school, including Bethany’s own administration.

Along with this relief from the blahs of February, many students began planning for spring break. Aerobics classes, tanning sessions, swimsuit shopping and saving up were on many students’ agendas.

With what seemed to be a light at the end of the winter tunnel—weather-wise—Snow Carnival was only a fleeting hope. Instead, Renner Union Programming Board hosted Mardi Gras, Bethany-style, a scaled-down version of the annual New Orleans festival. The combination of Brownie Mary and cash prizes for the best costumes allowed everyone to end the month with a good time. ♦

MARCH

Peculiar weather we're having

by Kara Schultz

march came in like a lamb, but the board of trustees had other ideas. A proposal to increase tuition by seven percent for the next school year was made.

To counteract this unwelcome news, Bethany Theatre presented "Charlotte's Web" by E.B. White to give everyone some lighthearted entertainment.

But this contrast was nothing compared to the weather. A month that began with temperatures in the 70s left everyone longing for the beaches of their spring break destinations.

Soon everyone couldn't wait to get the heck out of Bethany! One morning everyone woke to snow and freezing temperatures. Students trekked to class in the blizzard, and by afternoon about six inches had fallen.

In the morning, it was official—Snow Carnival was on. Some decided this would be a great opportunity to catch up on lost sleep. By afternoon the community emerged to take part in the planned activities.

The snow sculpture contest saw a variety of entries, including Simba and Nala from "The Lion King," a giant green snake and a castle. Simba and Nala were the victors, earning their creators $50.

After the sculpture contest, it was off to the Coal

Bowl for snow football. This turned out to be more of a snow battle—there wasn't much need for the ball.

The Snow Carnival dance was the scene of the coronation of royalty. Senior Steph Cooke was crowned queen, with junior Jay Swartzwelder as king.

By the middle of the month, everyone was getting a little restless and attention spans shrank. Spring break finally arrived and everyone hit the road for a week of relaxation.

Vacationers returned for six more weeks of classes. The weather was improving and concentration became increasingly more difficult. ♦

APRIL

What an honor

by Kara Schultz

The hills were definitely alive with the sound of music from day one of Rennerpalooza, RUPB's version of the real thing. Day one featured Bethany bands flavor ready, Forehed and Kozmos. The following weekend saw the Bethany debut of two local bands.

With all this excitement, it was time for nominations for the Richard B. Kenne Award for outstanding professor. Nominees were professors James Allison, John Burns, Russell Clothier, Jon Gordon, Jeanne Hoff, Mark MacWilliams, Ken Morgan and Majid Sawtarie. Allison received the award during a ceremony in the Academic Parlour.

Phi Kappa Tau also had cause for pride. The anti-hazing law introduced by Phi Tau passed through both houses in West Virginia, forcing all state institutions of higher education to adopt an anti-hazing policy.

The German club had its own success as well. Deutsch Welle, a trilingual multicultural cable channel became available, providing information with a European perspective on world affairs for German, Spanish and English speaking students.

Honors, honors and more honors were received at the Honors Day Convocation. The Francis O. Carfer Prize, given to the senior who made the most outstanding contribution to Bethany was awarded to Chris Colcombe and Sven de Jong. Brian Lemasters and Keely Oelschlager took home the awards for outstanding junior man and woman.

With the completion of Communication Week, members of the department were presented with awards for outstanding scholarship and involvement with the various student media on campus.

A particularly involved member of WTVX, freshman Keith Piasecki, had the unfortunate opportunity of putting the skills he's learned to work. When a fire occurred in Morlan Hall, Piasecki was there, n to help extinguish the fire, but to capture it on video. His footage was used by WTOV 9 in Steubenville, in its reporting of the story. Piasecki, along with resident assistant senior Joe Barki and junior Billy Koeder, were honored by Michael Allison, director of Safety and Security at SBOG for their efforts in putting out the fire and saving the life of a low student. It's a good thing these students didn't discover their fire fighting ability a week sooner. The regurgitator, Stevie Starr, may have been a little upset with them extinguishing the flames he spit out after swallowing half a can of butane.

Starr's natural talent for swallowing and regurgitating various objects, including a billiard ball, a light bulb and powdered sugar, shocked and amazed those in attendance. Most were not shocked, however, when he regurgitated three goldfish, as this is fairly commonplace to most Bethanians (as is regurgitating them).

The end of the month found the Bethanians in the humanitarian spirit. A total of 87 units of blood was donated at the annual Red Cross Blood Drive, with the sisters of Phi Mu winning the award for the highest percentage of participants.

MAY

by Kara Schultz

It had finally arrived. May was here and with it the hustle and bustle of studying for finals and comps, getting things packed up and ready to go home and enjoying what's left of Bethany life before summer.

Bethany College Theatre added to the mix with its production of the musical, "Dames at Sea." Theatre wasn't the only showcase of talent, however. The annual Student Art Show allowed the artistic talents of the students of Bethany to shine. In conjunction with the show, the advanced photography class showed off its works at a show at the Coffee House.

May Morning Breakfast, another Bethany tradition, provided the senior women of Bethany with an opportunity to pay tribute to those who had achieved success. Janet Long, '78, president of the Alumni Association, addressed the women and encouraged them to give back to Bethany after they've left. Senior Stef Magnino was honored with the Alece C. Gresham Leadership Award for the contributions she has made to the college during her years at Bethany.

With all these events going on, Alpha Sigma Phi began to feel a little left out. They decided they would have their own "event," resulting in their violation of the social events policy in the Interfraternity Council Constitution. Sanctions included community service, social probation, alcohol awareness chapter development and sponsorship of a campus-wide alcohol awareness function.

Hopefully all this didn't take away from studying, as once again senior comprehensive examinations were under way. The same routine, writtens for two days and then orals, had the seniors scrambling to refresh themselves on all they've learned in the past four years. Every hour on the hour, cheers echoed with the chimes of the Old Main clock tower for seniors being released from the jaws of orals.

Now that comps were out of the way, it was time to celebrate with those who had "comped" before them— alumni. Friends returned for receptions, presentations of awards, class reunions and fraternity and sorority open houses. It was a wonderful opportunity to hear of their successes and know there was hope for those about to leave the safety they'd known for so long here at Bethany.

Signifying their entrance into the real world, commencement brought friends, family, faculty and administrators to congratulate the seniors on the completion of the four rigorous years at Bethany. Finally, the moment they'd all dreamed of was upon them. Under the beautiful sunny May skies, bachelor of science and bachelor of degrees were conferred on 136 seniors, as well number of honorary degrees. Murry Gell-Mann, Nobel Prize winner in physics, was the featured speaker Urging seniors to work toward a sustainable future was awarded an honorary doctor of science degree President D. Duane Cummins. In addition, Richard Hamm, general minister and president of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) and Baccalaureate speaker was awarded an honorary doctor of divinity; Jim Combs founder of the West Virginia Hillbilly newspaper awarded an honorary doctor of letters; Henry Louis C. Jr., W.E.B. DuBois professor of humanities at Harvard University, was awarded an honorary doctor of letters and A. Herbert Sandwen, a 1951 Bethany graduate awarded an honorary doctor of laws.

To top off all the honors, Jenny Wotowiec was awarded the Oreon E. Scott Award for achieving the highest academic standing in the senior class. Finally, as Wotowiec would say, it's now time to go fishin'. ♦

Can it be true? Are we really seniors?” The question hung in the minds of the members of the class of 1995 as they made their return to Bethany for their final year. Looking ahead to their final months at their alma mater, new experiences were in front of them. There was the last minute rush to make sure all the perspective courses and practicums were done. The threat of those long hours trying to wrap up the ever dreadful senior project also loomed before their eyes and fingertips. The worst of all was that forboding five-lettered word: COMPS! Through it all, however, the seniors still managed to get it all done and survive with most of their brains intact. Along the way there had to be time to enjoy those little things for the last time: the bar, Bid Night, arguing with professors and hanging out with the underclassmen. It was definitely a year to remember—a time to savor those last few moments as a kid, yet prepare to merge with the adult world. When it was all said and done, the 136 members of the newest graduating class survived seemingly everything in their four years at Bethany. Now, if they only could get into grad schools or find jobs...

Hey down there! Wondering which is the least strenuous way to class, seniors Bethany Walsh and Matthew Zilich realize there's need to worry about traffic, but all ways are strenuous. (by Yvonne Seitzer)

by Emily Schoenfeldt

all right, somehow they've paid their four years worth of tuition. They've earned enough credits to graduate, done their practicums, suffered through comps, convocation and every other ritual that goes along with being a senior. So now what do they want?

Basically they just want to move on. This is the goal that has kept them conscious for the past two semesters and has kept them from jumping into a swimming pool full of hungry wolverines.

So, what did they learn? They learned a lot about living, and grew up about 10 years in their four years at BC. They learned about who they are, what makes them tick and how to interact with different people from various backgrounds.

The real world awaits them and they are prepared. After all, they've never missed an episode of the show and can't wait to meet that nutty Puck guy.

ethanians usually feel they don't have time to do everything. Apart from classwork, there are more than 30 clubs on campus, and a typical Bethanian is heavily involved in many of these. So, chances are, a student on this campus is nearly always in a hurry to get to a class, meeting or sporting event. And then there's the exciting Bethany nightlife (or daylife) we all love so much—downing a few at Bubba's, checking in with Allen at the College Inn, dangling your feet in the creek while visiting Em's, listening to an acoustic guitarist at the Coffee House, planning and partaking in numerous Greek functions and then there are always the various entertainers brought to you by those folks at Renner Union. Sometimes it may even seem as if Bethanians schedule their classes around the more social part of their lives at Bethany. Yes, Bethanians do study, but they manage their time well enough so that they have plenty of time for good, hard play as well. And play they do...

IT'S TIME TO remember

• Thank God it's over!

Mystery, intrigue, black hoods and cookouts all appropriately describe the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity. Alpha Sigs love to barbecue. They enjoy so much that one day senior Mike O'Malley wanted to be part of the fun and caught fire—much to the dismay of many of his brothers because their cars were parked next to his.

The brothers also enjoy mountain biking, outdoor activities and some not-so-outdoor activities like fooseball and paint ball. Paint ball is an off-campus adventure, involving going to a course, renting paint guns and trying to capture the flag.

When they aren't physically playing sports, they can be found attached to a television complete with a Sega. Since most of the brothers have them, there are lots of opportunities. The game of choice—ice hockey.

Very few freshmen women will forget this year's "Meet Market." The brothers went out this year by renting limousines in order to make sure the young women had a ride to the Alpha Sig house.

A Halloween party replaced their traditional haunted house this year. Each room in the house served a different drink and the guests made rounds to all of the rooms getting a special "treat" from the brothers.

The Mock Wedding mixer with Zeta Tau Alpha is also another special night for Alpha Sigs. This is the only time of the year that it is cool to be in polyester. The bachelor party found the brothers congratulating the lucky groom, senior Pete Ream, who was marrying senior Maggie Thornburg.

Another fun mixer this year was the mixer with Alpha Xi. Everyone dressed in clothes from that decade, practicing breakdancing and sang the popular song "Gloria."

Their house on Point Breeze Drive eventually shakes with the sounds of laughter, music and friendship.

ALPHA XI DELTA

Welcome to Boogie Wonderland

by LeAnn Root

Home of the Disco Queens may be the best way to describe Alpha Xi Delta. Nowhere else on campus could you walk in and see people dancing on the furniture to "Saturday Night Fever." Or, better yet, dancing in the parking lot trying to perfect the line dancing portion of that very same movie.

What do you hear when you first walk into the Alpha Xi house? More than likely you will hear the lounge-grunge watching television in the downstairs lounge. The lounge grunge just sits around doing homework and watching television. Of all the choices available, their favorites are "Melrose Place," "The Late Show With David Letterman" and "ER." When the time isn't right for those shows, they enjoy movies such as "What's Love got to do With It," and "The Sound of Music," which seems to be a permanent fixture on the TV. Not only do they watch the movies, but they even act along with them.

Alpha Xi, along with the Alpha Xi chapter from West Liberty State College, had a great time at Halloween with their party for the children in Bethany. It was part of their philanthropy, Choose Children. Each Alpha Xi chapter chose their own philanthropy as long as it involved children. After the children left, the Alpha Xis got ready and went to Bubba's dressed as Catholic school girls with their teachers, a pregnant nun and a priest.

No one will ever forget the night juniors Steph Kucharski and Diane Dranikoski were locked in the laundry room and no one would let them out until they recited the alphabet backwards and said a Hail Mary after every sixth letter.

If insomnia is a disease, it surely infected the Alpha Xi house. At all hours of the night, there was someone around doing something like barbecuing in the backyard or wearing 70s clothes and dancing in their rooms.

Even with all the fun and excitement in the house, they will always know that their Xi Love will last forever.

Load it up and move it out

by LeAnn Root

This year at Beta Theta Pi can be divided into two distinct eras. The first was in the Hagerman House on Old Parkinson Hill. The second began with the spring term when the brothers moved into their new house in town Bethany.

Hagerman is fondly remembered. Its lack of garbage cans led to beer cans and debris finding a home on the floor. It seemed to have an uncanny habit of falling off the walls and breaking.

A lovely ritual—9 a.m. checkout—was a favorite activity. When a female friend spent the night at Beta, some of the brothers would wake up early, hip the door and wake the host and her host to tell her it was past checkout time. For those who have never had this experience, hipping a door is a practical way to open a door, just in case someone lost the key...of course, by throwing a hip into a door, thereby locking it. Who needs security?

Another popular activity at Hagerman was fat man football. The fire lane outside of the house was painted as a full field where the Betas practiced their moves.

Games are always exciting for the Betas. The annual game and Hell mixer with Phi Mu, where the upstairs is heaven and the downstairs hell, creates many fond memories. Another popular party is the boxer shorts (or lack thereof) and football mixer with Kappa Delta.

The Hagerman era ended in December with the infamous Christmas chapter, when they decided to do a little cleaning and rid the house of some unwanted furniture. Now they, too, could tell stories of "the old house."

Alumni are a source of inspiration for Beta. Alumnus and resident historian John Schweinberg, '91, visits the chapter frequently and spends much quality time with the brothers. Also, their landlord, alumnus Art Musicaro, '77, sent letters to many of the brothers welcoming them to the new house.

Spring semester brought the opening of the new house. Life at Beta changed—slightly. Here they became a bunch of sober guys, hanging out watching sports, "The Bionic Man," "Knight Rider," the history and science channels, "Beavis and Butthead," and a colorful array of films depicting the reproductive habits of humans on the big screen TV in the Great Hall. When not glued to the TV, they play "Betaball" in the backyard, hoping to hit one over the house for a home-run.

Whether at Hagerman or the new house, some things will never change. Senior Tom Harvey will always be sleeping. There will always be a game of cards in progress, and they will always be brothers in Beta Theta Pi with Darth Vader forever by their side. ♦

DELTA TAU DELTA

They keep growing and growing

by LeAnn Root

Delta Tau Delta has the privilege of being the only national fraternity founded at Bethany. Since they were founded here, they have a special pride in their fraternity.

The spring semester was eventful for Delt, as they took 18 pledges in spring formal rush. They also won the W. Kirk Woolery Award, which is given to the men's social group or housing organization with the highest GPA in the previous semester.

All those pledges roaming around tend to cause a little mischief. Sophomore Regis Bane will forever remember this pledge class because they did him a special favor, ridding him of some unnecessary footwear. Bane had a pair of old tennis shoes that had worn out their welcome. The pledges decided to help him get rid of the shoes. They took a match to them, and the shoes ignited as if they were drenched in gasoline. Ah...what memories.

In general, the Deltas aren't always that devilish. They are good humored guys who hang out, pretend to fist bump, and play basketball at the Recreation Center. They don't just goof around—they do a lot of work for the fraternity too. This year they held fundraising activities in order to get the chapter out of debt with the national organization, adopted the American Heart Association as their philanthropy and worked with the Howard Hanson Wellness Center, Wheeling, by participating in the Fall Walk.

The fraternity's events do not all have philanthropic ends. The Deltas also sponsor Late Nights, parties that run from midnight to whenever the last person drops. They also have some very memorable mixers with societies, including the western mixer with Alpha Xi Delta.

All the work the Deltas do together brings them closer together as a brotherhood, and makes them more than just friends. ♦

KAPPA ALPHA ORDER

There's order in the house

by LeAnn Root

There are three things that make Kappa Alpha different from the other Greek organizations on campus. It is an Order, the house has communal showers and the members are very diverse. They all stay the same people they were before they pledged. The KAs do their own activities and are their own people, yet their brotherhood is very strong.

The KAs enjoy the wall in front of their house immensely. Often times they can be seen sitting on the wall drinking and conversing with their neighbor, Sigma Nu. They love this wall so much, they even did some gardening to improve its appearance. They decided to prune a tree that hung over the wall. It was such a good job that the tree should never need pruning again.

Gardening is not KA's only outdoor activity. They enjoy going to the waterfalls and taking in the great outdoors.

The big screen television in their lounge is a great source of entertainment. When they aren't channel surfing, they are watching sports, "The Wonder Years," "Baywatch," and nature films featuring those zany human beings.

Every year, they hold the annual Goldfish party. This year, two records for swallowing goldfish were broken, by the same person. The first record of 152 fish was broken by freshman Shane Manso. He also broke the freshman record of 93 fish. This amazing feat was even more extraordinary because the little critters did not come back to visit him later.

Another yearly activity is the Dixie Ball. The first night of the weekend, they meet their dates outside of Old Main and escort them to the formal. The second night they hold a bonfire.

The KAs will always remember dancing on the pool table, family night at the Bison Inn, good advice from "Father James" Powers, "Sweet Home Alabama" (their party song) and the spirit of KA. The heart of the Order, given to them by their spiritual founder, Gen. Robert E. Lee, will beat for many years to come. ♦

KAPPA DELTA

The spirit lives on

by LeAnn Root

Welcome to the Hotel Kappa Delta," a strange variation on the Eagles classic...actually it is the favorite song of Sigma Xi. But hotel management is not only KD business venture. They also dabble in gambling, the Casino Night party was a huge success. The party featured popular card and casino games—blackjack, euchre, craps and blackjack. Throughout the evening bodie jars, collector pillowcases and KD sisters were auctioned off. In fact, sophomore Gwen Bowman went for $176,000 in KD currency to junior Curt Adsworth.

The excitement preceding Casino Night led to the revival of an old tradition. Alumnae tell stories of a rock on Pa. Route 31 that was traditionally decorated by KD. In recent years, other people have painted over the rock, but on the eve of Casino Night, the rock was reclaimed in true KD fashion.

The most interesting mixer of the year is always with Beta. The theme: boxer shorts, or lack thereof. The sport: football. More explanation is really not needed.

Parties and mixers aren't where all the most special memories come from. The everyday events are the most important.

Living in a smoke-free environment has its downfalls from time to time, especially when winter rolls around. Smokers bundle up in heavy coats and blankets to bond on the balcony by the light of the Tiki torches.

When things get tough, and tempers flare, the sisters get together for asparagus. Sometimes midnight road trips are just the thing to relieve tension.

KDs also strive to improve their technical skills. Several books about interpersonal relationships circulate the house. The literature is discussed openly and the diagrams are critiqued as to their feasibility. Members follow the open motto "Ta Kala Diokomen—Let us strive for that which is honorable, beautiful and highest," everyday. Love and time shared are what hold this group together. Through them, the KD spirit will live forever.

PHI KAPPA TAU

They don't get mad, they get even

by LeAnn Root

study in how to make an ordinary day extraordinary is the best description of the Phi Kappa Tau fraternity. No matter what day it is, there is always something that creates a memorable time. Each cube has a totally different personality. There are cubes for loud music and dancing, for those who are and even those who are not. In the study cube, screaming junior mates Curtis Wadsworth and Schroeder don't disturb the academic endeavor—they actually add to it. The upstairs cubes are the places for just hanging out. They sit around, talk and listen to music.

Special days are always popular. The night of the Academy Awards found the downstairs lounge set up like a theater, complete with a balcony and reserved seating. Seats were reserved for fans of actress Susan Sarandon, who were nicely asked to sit in the trash.

Traveling is always an adventure with Phi Tau. On a trip to Westminster College, they found an abandoned toilet that they decided to take home and call their own. This poor toilet was lost in an unfortunate accident when it rolled down the hill toward the Zeta house and was thrown away.

Afternoons are always filled with the soothing sounds of the band 'flavor ready' echoing through the house. Although it disturbed many a nap, no one really cared because at Phi Tau, they don't get mad, they get even.

The best experience of the year was the chance to hang out together. The fun and the friendships will blend together and become a lasting memory of their years in the Phi chapter of Phi Kappa Tau. ♦

PHI MU

Always the faithful

by LeAnn Root

Like the sands through the hour glass, so are the days at Phi Mu. Many an hour is spent watching television. When one o'clock on weekday afternoons rolls around, the TV is automatically turned to "Days of Our Lives." But "Melrose Place" and "The Ricki Lake Show" are not forgotten either.

Important things happen everyday at Phi Mu. Things as important as formals and as insignificant as sitting in the cube just talking about nothing or doing homework together. There isn't a Phi Mu on campus who hasn't walked into the house to hear the sounds of laughter and sisters doing aerobics with Gillad in the upstairs lounge.

Never fear, all of these precious memories were saved thanks to senior Nicole Pollera and her video camera. Will there be footage of the gang singing "Stroup Stroup," a slight variation of the Salt N Pepa song "Shoop," when junior Beth Stroup walks in the house?

When they aren't busy watching television or doing aerobics, a lull in the evening stirs crazy things in these Phi Mus. Sometimes they delve deep into their closets and dress in "play clothes"—old yucky '70s attire. After all this preparation, with no place better to go, they roam around Beta. Scary thought.

After college is over, they'll look back at the special friendships they have made, and the times gossiping and just being there for one another. Their open motto, "Les Soeurs Fideles," meaning the faithful sisters, truly describes the way they feel about one another.

SIGMA NU

Taking the lead

by LeAnn Root

The guys that live on Fair Street are a study in culture. The members are a diverse group originating from different countries including Canada, India and the Gambia. They also come from varied religious backgrounds. However, the differences only make them grow closer through their respect for one another and their diversity. A lot of this respect is instilled during their time as candidates (otherwise known as pledges) when they learn about L.E.A.D. (Leadership, Ethics, Achievement and Development). This process teaches them to have a new perspective on old views.

The best party at Sigma Nu every year is the Bow Brawl. Brawl is a two day event held over the weekend. On Saturday evening they enjoy a dinner, where the brothers celebrate the incoming and outgoing officers. Some of them read original, often humorous, but always sentimental poetry. The previous afternoon, the house is full of many visitors view the infamous wall. Then in the evening they flood the basement, usually with beer. However, every year the tradition called for the substitution of water. Then they line mattresses up along the walls and go around the basement.

When the weather turns nice, the Sigma Nus desert their house and move outside. The yard turns into a playground where the brothers participate in a variety of activities like lacrosse, volleyball and football, and let's not forget the vast amount of charcoal they use preparing backyard barbecues.

No matter what you are doing, you can always find someone around who is interested in doing the same thing. Variety is a strong bond between the Sigma Nus. With that variety, time together and fun, they grow to be a strong family rather than just a group of guys. ♦

ZETA TAU ALPHA

Festering with woobie blankets

by LeAnn Root

They are the women in black, accessorized with silver jewelry. Why? No one knows but the Zetas themselves. Whatever the reason, these women of Theta chapter know how to have a good time.

Their Mock Wedding with Alpha Sig is one of the highlights of the fall semester. This mixer is the only time that it's cool to dress incredibly wacky in outrageous garb. The Hitch 'em & Ditch 'em mixer in the spring with Sigma Nu allows the women to marry and divorce as many men as possible in a few short hours.

Mixers aren't the only ways they have good times. Zetas tune in to "Melrose Place" and "Beverly Hills, 90210" every week. These shows are practically house functions. The best part isn't just watching the shows. It's watching everyone's face as they react to the shows.

When the evening isn't call for Melrose or 90210, Zetas like to festering awhile. Festering is what they do when they want to do anything. Women with woobie blankets and comfy clothes sit up on lounge couches and relax. They wonder why it isn't offered as a two-course.

What makes Zeta special are the women who are themselves sisters. They have a truly special relationship. They spend time laughing together, sitting together and just doing crazy things together.

It is possible they never have the same special relationship with another group of people. For that, they cherish what they have and continue to make memories.

You don't have to be a Bethany student to cheer on the women's soccer team. Just ask young Justin Gregory, who helps junior Tammi Weishar applaud his aunt, junior Heather Gregory, on the playing field. (by Jon Vogel)

Uniquely different

by LeAnn Root

Hex Mix—not only was it the name of Campbell Hall's intramural team but it is an accurate description of the women who live there. Campbell houses independent and Greek-affiliated women; however, it does not put a dividing line between them. Their tastes are unique and different. Mostly they enjoy just hanging around each other's rooms, watching television (especially "Melrose Place"), playing with Ouija boards and sunbathing behind the dormitory. Campbell women will certainly remember the great times they had during their uniquely different year.

COMMUTERS

The great escape

by LeAnn Root

Although most students lived in college-owned housing there was a select bunch who escaped to apartments off campus or the Catholic Community Center. Then there was the bunch who stayed at home with the folks. And there were those who were considered, "non-traditional" because they were a little older than the average student.

Living separately from the campus wasn't everything it was cracked up to be. Since they didn't spend as much time on campus, they were often in the dark when it came to campus activities. All in all, most students enjoyed living on their own. Apartments offered a quieter environment for studying and, well, good old freedom. ♦

Goodnight has a personality all its own compared to the other housing units because it is divided into two communities. The first floor, known as "House," shares a family spirit; but there is no obligation to participate in any of the house's activities. They entertain themselves with water battles, ranging sometimes as far as the upstairs half of Goodnight, game nights, movie nights, and road trips to Pizza Hut and Taco Bell.

The second floor consists of independent and Greek-affiliated women. They enjoy many evening visits from their friendly neighborhood raccoon. As far as activities are concerned, the women enjoy rollerblading across the lounge, decorating their cube walls with movie posters, and screaming across the lounge to the other cubes to draw their friends' attention. In March, the first and second floors held a late night, which members from virtually all social organizations attended. ♦

HERITAGE

Small but mighty

by LeAnn Root

Heritage House is one of the few co-ed dormitories offered at Bethany. It is traditionally known as the "study house," although this is not really true—the residents don't study more than the average student. They have all the fun and enjoyment that everyone else does. Rough games of football pop up in the lounge frequently. Beware anyone passing through. ♦

McDIARMID

Give us a reason to celebrate

by LeAnn Root

Always looking for a reason to celebrate, the women of McDiarmid House had many an opportunity this year.

They had a birthday party for just about everyone in the house, and when it wasn't anyone's birthday, SongBurst, Scatter-gories, and the ever popular card game, spades, provided entertainment.

When the party calls for alcohol some look to peach schnapps and Boone's, but they've also been known to chain a keg to the balcony.

When the weekend winds down, nail night gives them an opportunity to bond over polish, remover, emery boards and "Melrose Place."

Although they were from different countries, with two German students and a Japanese student, and different lifestyles, the women of McDiarmid found a special bond that will hold them together forever. ♦

WOOLERY

Beware of the dogs

by LeAnn Root

The men of Woolery playing Woolball in the courtyard next to the house is a familiar sight. An eight foot rim that hangs on the balcony gives even the shorter guys a chance to dunk.

When Woolball isn't in season, they play cards—boy do they play cards. Games such as spades, euchre and tonk are popular. When the cards get lost in the shuffle, the dominoes come out.

TV accompanies their card games and offers a break between Woolball games. Usually they watch sports—soccer in the afternoons, or basketball and football.

When the weather is bad, they roll out their very own golf course in the lounge. John Daly would be proud.

They don't spend all of their time in the confines of the house. This year they sponsored two late nights and had a mixer with Zeta Tau Alpha.

All the fun they have makes it easy for the Wool Dogs to be friends for a lifetime. ♦

THE CLASS OF 1998

A new chapter

by Emily Schoenfeldt

The blank pages of this new chapter are now filled with new experiences, knowledge and tradition. Freshmen officially begin their Bethany experience by surviving freshmen seminars, doing their own laundry, convocations, eating at the caf, dealing with RAs, Bubba's, Origins, Greek rush and mixers and other social outings. All done with little to no sleep.

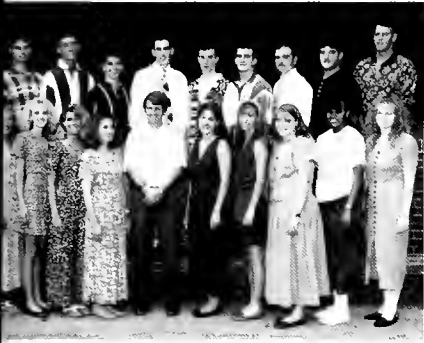

So what's so different about college life? For some, nothing. For others, a lot. You meet a lot of people here and you don't have just one best friend. Some professors allow you to call them by their first names. You do things your mother would kill you for if she knew about them, and your father might be proud of you if you had the guts to tell him. You experience a lot of firsts. Think back, you'll remember them. Some good, some bad, some embarrassing.

The survival of the freshman year at Bethany leads to three more fun-filled years, consisting of lasting friendships, quality education and maturity that prepares students for the future. Now that you have struggled through your freshman year, savor the experiences they go by very quickly.

THE BETHANY EXPERIENCE

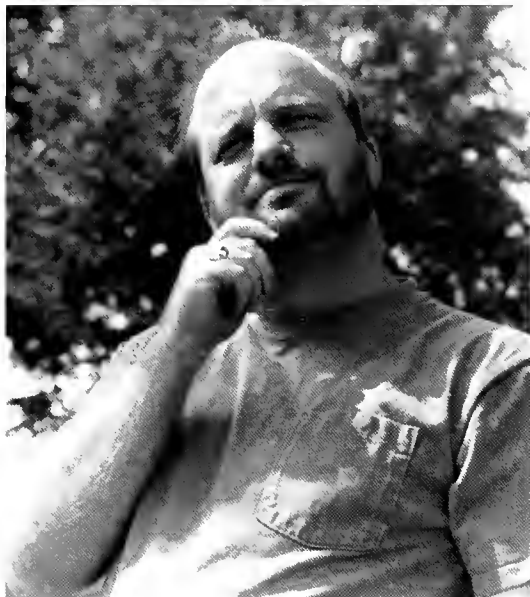

four years spent in Bethany... stagnation or stimulation? The choice is up to each student. We all know the town of Bethany isn't a hotbed of entertainment; but there are so many club and school-sponsored activities on campus that boredom is hard to come by. SBOG sponsors more than 35 clubs to provide a wide variety of fun-filled meetings and excursions for Bethany students, making life on a campus of about 700 almost exciting. Outdoors Club members have been known to jump from airplanes, while Model U.N. members get down and serious about the state of the world. The 20 members of Circle K lend a helping hand and the International Students Association makes Bethany more of a melting pot. The campus media keeps everyone informed of Bethany happenings and thespians in the theatre keep us entertained. We also make our own fun with everything from a trip out to Castleman's, a jaunt down to the bar or just hanging out at the houses. The size of Bethany makes for a family spirit between students, faculty and the town. Professors are always available to help with clubs, activities or to chill with on a personal level. And of course, if all else fails, there are always classes. But, as we all know, we'd rather have fun.

FACULTY, STAFF & ADMINISTRATORS

And they continue to keep the place

...R.U.N.N.I.N.

by Emily Schoenfeldt

When thinking about the faculty, the first thing that comes to mind isn't the lectures at 8 a.m. or the heavy reading assignments. The most memorable thing about the faculty is the special effort they make to get to know their students and make Bethany a more interesting place.

A "Can I sign you up for my class yet?" from professor Gary Larson as you are passing through Oglebay Hall, or waking up to the sound of the French "r" with professor Pauline Nelson adds to the Bethany experience. A cynical laugh with professor Lana Hartman Landon about the ironies of life or a test on 'They Might Be Giants' with professor Russell Clothier make the days pass quickly. It's the time that they spend out of the classroom befriending their advisees, helping with assignments—just brightening everyone's day that makes the difference at Bethany.

You have to be here to experience

by LeAnn Root and Nicolette Popa

Everyday, the world becomes a smaller place. It's necessary for students to learn about other cultures and kinds of people in order to function in the job market. Several clubs have addressed this issue and are educating the Bethany community in the ways of the world outside its little sphere.

The African American Student Alliance was started at the beginning of the school year. The alliance was founded by junior Jon Blackmon, sophomores Terry Jackson, Angela Oaks and Ayanna Smith, along with professor Jo-Ellen Asbury. They felt a need to educate people about African Americans and show they had a voice.

In February, Black History Month, a speaker came to campus to discuss interracial relationships. The AASA also invited inner city children from Cleveland to Bethany for weekends of fun and learning. Out of these weekends, AASA members hoped to give the children a positive sense of direction and an encouraging outlook after high school.

Another organization involved with cultural affairs is the Model United Nations. Model U.N. was formed on campus three years ago by professor Clinton Maffet.

Throughout the semester, club members prepare for U.N. simulation conferences which they attend twice a year. During these conferences, each school represents a different country and role plays an actual U.N. situation. The delegates serve on different committees chosen according to their interests.

Model U.N. sponsors a high school conference every year. This year, 120 students from both public and private high schools attended.

This organization helps expose its members to issues and problems they will be dealing with during their professional careers. It also encourages international understanding.

The French, Spanish and German clubs bridge the gap of cultural understanding by exposing their members to different ways of life in European countries. The clubs take trips to museums, operas and films in their chosen languages. They sponsor speakers about life in other countries and invite native speakers to converse with the club members.

The major event for all foreign language groups is the college's Foreign Language Day, an annual high school competition held every spring.

In years to come, historians will look back and laugh at the cultures separated by language, custom and color. The clubs—AASA, Model U.N. and the foreign language organizations—are on the wave to the future. Through education and experience, we learn that the ties that bind us are stronger than the differences that tear us apart. ♦

*b*ison athletes pounded their way onto the playing fields this year and found it was a time to celebrate in a big way. The stampede started in grand style with the men's soccer team capturing the NCAA Division III championship, a feat long in the making but still welcomed after all these years. The football team saw more than 70 new recruits, and despite a season with more losses than wins, it started the rebuilding process. On the women's side of things, the soccer team won the PAC title for the fourth time in a row. The softball and basketball teams, along with the men's baseball team, made it to postseason play; all were invited to ECAC tournaments. Swimmers competed in a new swimming facility as the Johnson Health and Recreation Center opened. Men's basketball continued to struggle, and cross country had its ups and downs, but came away as the best academic team of all Bison squads. Spectators gathered to watch the "Dickman and Beckett Show," as these track phenoms continued to break records. It was also a year for comebacks. Three sports joined the round-up. Diving made a splash as it resurfaced after a 10-year absence. Tennis, both men's and women's, once again became a part of Bethany athletics. ◇

A season of

H•I•G•H•S

The fall season of Bison sports began with great expectations and proved to be a season to remember.

Heavy recruitment and coaching changes promised to bring excitement to the Bethany world of sports. For the first time in more than five years, women's tennis was on the roster of fall sports, coached by Lisa Campanell-Komara. Coach Ted Eskildsen took over women's soccer, as coach Jan Forsty moved over to volleyball.

The biggest success story of the fall season was the men's soccer team. Making a comeback from a point in the season when play-offs were a distant hope, the team went on to capture the national title. The 27 years were worth the wait for the sweet taste of victory that will last a lifetime.

The men's soccer team wasn't the only champion. The women's soccer team claimed its fourth consecutive Presidents' Athletic Conference title. The Bison recorded the best record in the history of the women's soccer program and the first winning season since 1987. Junior forward Missy Miller was named PAC most valuable player for the second year in a row.

The tennis team tied the school record for the most wins in a season, finishing 6-6.

Three Bison were named to All-Conference teams: German exchange student Beatrix Maier earned first team All-PAC honors while freshman Keri Rohland and sophomore Bobbi Mills were named to the second team All-PAC. Maier finished 10-1 for the season, and is Bethany's first PAC champion ever.

The cross country teams concluded their season by competing in the NCAA Division III Southeast regional championship at Piedmont Park in Atlanta.

The football team was graced with more than 70 plebes fresh off the high school gridiron. Although they had a losing season, the gridders made a good showing for such a young team. Sophomore Bison defensive back Shedrick Young repeated the feat he achieved last year when he was voted one of the top defensive backs in the PAC by the coaches and named to the PAC defensive first team.

Meanwhile, sophomore offensive tackle Regis Bane made PAC offensive second team while PAC defensive second team honors went to senior defensive end Eric Carder and senior defensive back Dave Shelek.

Carder was also named the recipient of the Ray Nola Memorial Award. This award is given every year to the senior athlete who best exemplifies the attributes of scholarship, dedication and loyalty.

In volleyball, sophomore Liz Broughton was named to first team All-PAC squad. Named to the second team was sophomore Wendy Shaffer. Junior Leigh Henderson and freshman Amy Thomas were named to the honorable mention team.

Although not all the teams lived up to their expectations, some surpassed them. Great expectations led to great champions.

and finally, the ultimate high . . .

• WE WIN •

by Crystal Ola

It was a long time in the making, but 'Here We Go Bison' results in the ultimate victory.

The cheers of the opposing team's fans began to die down as senior forward Steve Lindquist raced down the sideline with the ball early in the second overtime period of the championship game. Those same cheering fans were silenced as he crossed the ball perfectly in front of the net. As junior midfielder Pat Ricci powered the ball into the back of the net, the eruption of the Bethany fans overpowered Trenton Stadium.

As the final seconds of the game ticked away, the play-off run of the Bison came into perspective. All the overtimes, the incredible saves and the hard work finally paid off. The Bison were the victors.

Early on it looked as if the season might be a long one for all the wrong reasons. After the team's loss to Ohio Wesleyan, coach John Cunningham was asked how he felt about possibly having a losing season for the first time in his 27 year career. But Cunningham and the 25 members of his squad were unwilling to accept defeat.

Many great players have competed on the playing field for the Bison soccer team. And their teams may have been better, more talented, but the 1994 team somehow put together all the pieces of the puzzle. The team, as senior co-captain Dave Farmer said, had heart.

The season will go down in Bethany soccer history as the greatest ever. The booters had an incredible run through the play-offs, defeating Greensboro, Virginia Wesleyan and the University of California at San Diego.

In the Final Four match-up, Bethany was pitted in the semi-finals against Wisconsin-Oshkosh. The Bison went on to defeat Johns Hopkins in the NCAA Division III championship game, winning their first ever national title.

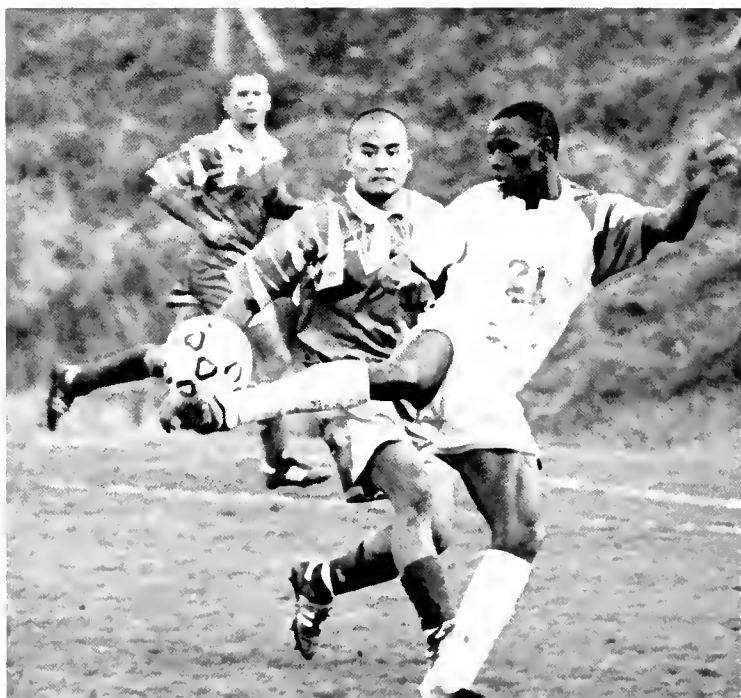

After the game, the Bison were presented with their national championship trophy. The victory was by far the sweetest of the 280 career wins for coach John Cunningham.

WINTER SPORTS

by Crystal Ola

Heating up the cold months by

Although the winter season may not have produced championship teams, there was no lack of record-breaking athletes. From basketball to swimming to indoor track, old school records were shattered all season long.

Men's basketball had a disappointing season (5-20, 1-7), but found talent in many of the young players, and superstars in some of the veterans. But it was two leaders, senior center Joe Childress and sophomore guard Kevin Kozup, who provided the core for the cagers' victories.

Placing third on the all-time Bison scoring list, Childress passed the 1,000 point milestone and finished his illustrious Bethany career with 1,267 points.

Childress' season accomplishments of 15.4 points and 7.9 rebounds per game, as well as 54 percent shooting from the field, all ranked him in the top six in the conference. He was also named first team All-PAC center.

Also awarded first team status, Kozup was the only player in the PAC to average more than 20 points per game; his season average was 21.1 points per game. Kozup also finished seventh in the nation in three-point baskets per game, averaging 3.9 per contest.

The women's basketball team (15-9, 5-3) was invited to post-season play. The team entered the Eastern College Athletic Conference tournament as the No. 3 seed, but lost to Alvernia in 75-68 in overtime.

Senior guard Chris Colcombe finished her career with 902 points, 684 rebounds (third all-time at Bethany), 212 steals (second all-time), 237 assists (second all-time) and 53 blocks. Colcombe started in all 94 games over the past four years. Freshman forward Stephanie Cunningham made honorable mention and was voted Freshman Player of the Year.

The swim teams broke records too. Senior Laurelyn Rawson made first team All-PAC in the 50-yard freestyle with a time of 25.32, breaking a school record. She also broke school records in the 200-yard and 100-yard freestyle events. The women also captured six places in the third team all-conference, with school record-breaking times by the 200-freestyle relay team, 400-freestyle relay and 400-medley relay teams.

Senior Matt Tucker, who led the men to seven overall places, was named to the PAC second team for the 1,650-yard freestyle.

This winter was also an inaugural season for two Bison sports teams—diving and indoor track. Diving was re-introduced as a varsity sport with the completion of the Health and Recreation Center.

The season was an exciting one for the indoor track team, filled with record breakers and individual successes. Senior Rich Beckett broke his own school record, winning the 110-meter high hurdles with a time of 7.86 seconds. Senior Brian Dickman ran the 55-meter dash with a time of 6.73 seconds, a new Bethany record.

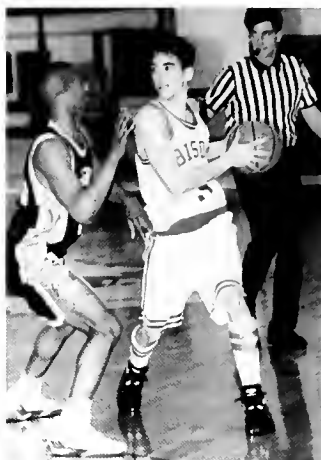

Junior Shedrick Young also broke a record in the long jump with a jump of 21 feet 11 1/2 inches. Young also set an indoor record for the triple jump with a distance of 42 feet 5 1/2 inches.

Sophomore distance runner Joe Martin set records in the 1,500-meters, with a time of 4:44.00, and in the 1,000-meters, with a time of 3:01.74. Senior Adam Kradel broke a distance record in the 5,000-meters with a time of 17:57.14. ♦

SPRING SPORTS

by Crystal Ola

Bison continue to be

Spring also saw its share of champions. Teams didn't live up to everyone's expectations, but many had shining moments.

Softball regained the PAC championship title. It finished the season 23-18-1 on the strength of senior centerfielder Shelley Cooper and sophomore third base player Wendy Shaffer's All-PAC First Team performances.

Shaffer was the Presidents' Athletic Conference leader in home runs with five, and she led the league in doubles with 13. Senior catchers Sharon Finney and Jen Mossgrove split time behind the plate, and both earned Second Team honors. Postseason play brought an invitation to the ECAC tournament. Although Bethany hosted, the home field advantage wasn't much help. The team lost but still took pride in a successful season.

The struggles of two teams, men's tennis and golf, weren't without the benefit of some bright spots in their seasons. Men's tennis returned after eight years, and ended up capturing third place in the PAC. Although a shortage of players caused the golf team to be disqualified from the PAC tournament, freshman Brian Taylor made Second Team All-PAC and junior Brian Stefan placed fifth in the Spiedel Invitational.

In track, seniors Brian Dickman and Rich Beckett continued to pave the way. Both attempted to compete in nationals, but fell short. Once again, Dickman earned top honors in the PAC. At the PAC championships, Dickman placed first overall and Beckett took second.

Dickman was first in the 100-meter dash and in the 400-meter hurdles. Beckett placed first in the 200-meter dash and in the 110-meter high hurdles. Both were on the teams that took first in the 4 x 100 relay and the 4 x 400 relay.

Junior Karalee Demko broke a school record the 1,500-meter run. Freshman Kathleen McGow set a new school record in the 800-meter run.

The greatest hopes were pinned on the baseball team. The team didn't capture the PAC title expected, and also lost the ECAC tournament postseason play. However, the Bison finished the season (23-12) on a good note, with impressive stats posted by both the team and individual players.

The team led the PAC in many categories: hitting (.456), batting (.351) and slugging (.479). The squad led the conference in doubles (69); runs scored (24); home runs (18); bases stolen (70); RBIs (234) and fielding (.957). In pitching, the team finished with an ERA of 3.17.

Individual players also stole the spotlight. Senior pitcher Ken Richey finished the season 9-1, with an ERA of 1.75. Richey also broke single season Bethany records. These feats earned Richey PAC Pitcher of the Year honors and ranked him among the Top 100 NCAA Division III pitchers in the nation.

Freshman pitcher Mark Dunst led the PAC with an ERA of 1.32. Junior shortstop Jeff Weekley's doubles set a Bethany single season record, as did his stolen bases record—27 for 30. He set a Bethany record with a career total of 74 stolen bases.

Weekley also set a single season Bethany record with 35 runs scored, and with 34 RBIs. All of Weekley's records made him the leader in the PAC in runs scored, stolen bases, doubles, runs scored and RBIs.

Finally, senior second baseman Bill Mattes took first ranking in the PAC with four home runs.

The Bison spring sports season was full of ups and downs, but in the end, Bison athletes were leaders in the PAC. ♦

It's straight from lunch and on to class for sophomore Shaina Samuel, who listens quietly while sophomore Marcie Williams
 bends her ear.

AT TIME TO Remember

ANOTHER YEAR TO REMEMBER

As Bethany students leave campus in May, following finals, comps and graduation, they will be able to look back on a very unique year. So many memorable things have happened in a handful of months—the entrance of an unusually large freshman class, an NCAA Division III soccer championship, the chance to see a man regurgitate various objects of your choice...or how about Rennerpalooza, Snow Carnival or the performance, once again, of Brownie Mary at the Mardi Gras dance in February? There are so many things for Bethanians to remember about the 1994-95 school year—most of which are little things, like hanging out with friends or chatting with favorite professors. These little things turn out to be just as important as the big ones—after all, when it really comes down to it, the most memorable moment of the year was the day the caf started opening at 11 a.m. for lunch...◇

Why, you can see all the way to The Gambia through this thing."

ing that the outlook on his future is as good, senior Malleh Sallah (left) peers through his oma at his fellow graduates across the quad as he waits for Commencement to become history.
